Progress Report

Your Progress Report is an outline of your progress towards earning your degree. It counts how many credits you've earned, then determines if you're on track to graduate by your graduation date. You can view what classes you've taken and which you need to take next.

The main progress report pages will give you an overview of your progress in general, as well as how many credits you've completed for each year and class type. To view details on specific classes, press the "View Details" button under a graph.

Here's a tip: If you press a section of one of the charts, it will show you all the classes that fall under that completion status.

Subject: Making up incomplete credits

Hi Saul,

I'm missing three credits after failing a liberal arts course sophomore year. How do you think I should make up those credits?

Thanks,
Jane
